

The Learning from Practice Manual

By Neil Thompson

With a Foreword by Dr Paul Stepney

A hands-on practice manual ideal for anyone involved in promoting workplace learning.

In just one publication, this manual provides significantly in-depth knowledge and understanding linked to practice learning and wider themes relevant to 'getting the job done'. No matter what stage you are at in your career and understanding, the key learning points will refresh or introduce current learning opportunities in a format that is easy to understand, and one that is extremely well written. I have no hesitation in recommending this publication for practice teachers, students, social workers and managers. Neil Thompson's extensive social work knowledge and experience clearly come through in an accessible way. John McGowan, General Secretary, The Social Workers Union

This manual has the Neil Thompson quality hallmark shining through on every page. Characteristically accessible and down to earth, it offers guidance and pointers to best practice for a wide range of practitioners. The emphasis upon learning is crucial; if you not only read but reflectively engage with its content you will enhance the service you provide. A "win-win" outcome is what this manual promises and deserves. Bernard Moss, Emeritus Professor, Staffordshire University

In his usual vibrant, personal and engaging way, Neil Thompson has drawn together the key elements of learning into an invaluable practice resource. He integrates individual and organizational realities (culture, leadership, values, power relations and politics), infuses them with theoretical depth, and translates this all into a guide for managing the practicalities of day to day practice in social work, social care and beyond. Professor Lou Harms, University of Melbourne

It is good to have available something that brings together key elements of teaching and learning social work in one publication. The book is presented in a way that will be helpful to professional social workers across the whole continuum of professional life. Furthermore, other professions involved in working with people and developing professional practice will no doubt find its contents relevant and very useful. Gwenan Prysor, Director of MA Social Work, Bangor University

Also available, The Social Worker's Practice Manual by Neil Thompson

Not a textbook, a hands-on manual of practice – a practical guide from one of the UK's most respected social work authors. Divided into thirty sections, each covering a key area of practice, this essential handbook will be invaluable to newly qualified social workers, students on placement and more experienced workers and managers wanting to get the best results.

The Care of Older People Practice Manual by Sue Thompson. The third in the series of Avenue Practice Manuals focuses on making sure that older people are treated with respect and dignity and as individuals in their own right.

A message from Neil ...

Who's in charge of your learning? Are you leaving it in the hands of trainers, tutors or others or are you in the driving seat for your own learning? It is now well established that the most successful learning is self-directed learning, where you decide (with support where needed) what you are going to learn and how you are going to learn it. That's why I developed the Avenue Professional Development Programme, an online community of learners keen to support one another in taking their learning forward the way they want to. See what the Programme has to offer at www.apdp.org.uk. And NOPT members get access to this at 25% off too! Just £7.50 per month. Contact me at neil@avenueconsulting.co.uk if you have any questions. Best wishes, Neil
